

RECENT DEATHS.

Mrs. Henry French.

Nearly seventy-eight bright useful years came to the turning last Wednesday morning in the departure of Mrs. Sarah Baker French. Lancaster was her birth place, but the larger part of her life was spent in this town the last years with her son, Frank O. French. Her father, O. W. Baker was skilful in affairs; from him and from her mother, of refined and beautiful character, descended to her the qualities she religiously cherished, which marked her life with strength and cheer.

At the age of fifteen she united with the village church—there was at the time only one—and in 1851 she was among the sixty-five who were set off to constitute the colony thereafter known as the South church. For several years she has been the only survivor, but one of that company. To every interest of the church as well as of the community she rendered whatever service she could with affectionate thought and care. It was at her suggestion that the semi-centennial of the first Christmas Tree in the village was made an occasion of special observance at the South church last month, and her paper of reminiscences read under the shadow of the commemorative tree was a felicitous feature of the evening. She retained the freshness of youth to the last, with a spirit both serious and playful, always adding some brightness and bracing quality to the social atmosphere. Her last days were in the chamber of peace where she fell asleep and passed in to the brightness beyond.

Horace W. Bailey.

Horace W. Bailey, United States marshal for Vermont and one of the best known men in the state died on Jan. 6th in the hospital at Rutland. The second son and third child of William V. and Abigail (Eaton) Bailey, he was born in Newbury, Jan. 16, 1852, educated in the district school and Newbury seminary, and began a remarkably busy and useful life as a teacher and merchant in his own town. Meanwhile he was clerk at the Fabyan House, the Old Orchard House, and at a hotel in the South. He was also town clerk, 1886-97; superintendent of schools, 1885-90; town representative, 1902; state senator, 1894 and 1896; state auditor and general commissioner, 1894-1900; member of the railroad commission, 1902-03; of the Champlain Tercenary commission 1906-08; and appointed United States marshal in 1903, holding that position till death, having his office at Rutland, but retaining his residence at Newbury. He was also a trustee of Bradford Savings bank, 10 years, and for some 20 years previous to his death of the Citizens Savings Bank and Trust company of St. Johnsbury, and the Orange Co. member of the state Republican committee. He was also entrusted with the settlement of several large estates, notable the Dr. C. L. Lindsey estate at Lancaster, and many others. These responsibilities required large business ability, extensive and minute knowledge of statute and mercantile law, prompt decision, great tact and knowledge of the art of managing men. He also found time for the cultivation of a wide acquaintance and for much literary work, mainly the communication upon historical subjects to the papers of the state and elsewhere. Yet with all these and many other cares he never seemed in a hurry, but found time for those personal kindnesses which busy men often neglect. The most genial man, generous to a fault, considerate of others, cordial of manner he made friends everywhere and his large frame and personal appearance made him remembered by all who ever saw him. He was a ready and effective speaker and an excellent presiding officer of a public assembly. He possessed a clear and forcible style, and could write readily upon any subject; his memory seldom failed him, but singularly, he had a distrust of his own literary ability and never published anything which he considered important without first submitting it to the criticism of some one whose judgment he was more sure of than his own. I think it was this diffidence, singular indeed, in a man of his versatility and self-reliance which restrained him from giving to the world, as he had often been urged to do, something more permanent than he had ever done. Mr. Bailey was a member of both the New York and Vermont historical societies, and one of the executive committee of the latter. He was deeply interested in the history of his native town, and presided at the various exercises of its 150th anniversary in August, 1912. He had been a trustee from its organization in 1896, of the Tenney Memorial Library, giving to it much time and work, and rejoiced in its growth from a few hundred to above seven thousand volumes. He was intensely fond of books, and had accumulated a large and valuable library, especially rich in works pertaining to the early history of the state, and only surpassed in this respect by the state and historical library at Montpelier. Some years ago he purchased the brick school house at Newbury village in which he kept his office, and had it remodelled the past season intending to return and spend the rest of his life among his books, and in some literary work.

For the Information of the Public:

We take this way of informing you that the St. Johnsbury Gas company is in no way connected with the St. Johnsbury Electric Company, or the Twin State Gas & Electric Company, as the Stock of The St. Johnsbury Gas Company is in the same hands as it was when the Corporation was organized.

Respectfully yours,
Directors of the St. Johnsbury Gas Company,
F. M. ABBOTT, President.

For many years he had been a great sufferer from Bright's disease and other complications, and had undergone the amputation of both feet—one six years ago, and the other in August. These afflictions he bore with fortitude and cheerfulness, he was recovering from the latter when attacked by his fatal illness. The funeral was held in the Methodist church at Newbury, where he attended, which was completely filled by his town's people, and by prominent men from all parts of the state, an impressive discourse being delivered by President Thomas of Middlebury College.

Mr. Bailey never married, but he was fond of home life and the society of young people, and is survived by a brother Warren and sister Mrs. R. S. Chamberlin and three children.

Ricker.

William Ricker died at his home in Woodsville, January 8. He was born in Groton, April 7, 1832. In 1850 he went to California accompanied by the late Dr. Darling of South Ryegate. When they reached the isthmus Dr. Darling was taken ill, and Mr. Ricker stayed with him there caring for him for three months. They stayed in California about three years. On April 2, 1857, he was married to Lodema Taisey and in '60 moved to Hardwick. Two years later he began the cattle business, which has taken so much of his time and interest all the rest of his life. In the fall of 1861 he moved to Peacham where he made his home for 19 years. It was in 1884 that he went to Woodsville where he has since made his home. He always kept up a keen interest in stock. He was the oldest stock dealer in New England. Even the day of his death he was discussing this business with one of the drovers. He did not retire from active business until two years before his death. He was for many years a trustee of the Woodsville Methodist Episcopal church, to which he was a generous contributor. Mr. Ricker was well known in many parts of New England and was always a favorite with all whom he came in contact with. The funeral services were held at the Methodist Episcopal church, January 9. Rev. J. R. Dinmore officiated. He is survived by his wife, three brothers, H. R. Ricker of Wells River, Harvey Ricker of Minneapolis, Charles Ricker of Groton, a sister, Mrs. Ella R. Whitehill of Groton, two children, W. A. Ricker of St. Johnsbury, Mrs. Rosa, Crown of Woodsville, three grandchildren, Albert Ricker of Boston, Mrs. Phillip Thompson of Yonkers, and Miss Callista Crown of Woodsville, two great-grandchildren Virginia Hughes Thompson, and Leiford Holman Thompson of Yonkers.

Bedard.
